CONCEPTO

Las plataformas de negocio entre empresas (B2B) o entre empresas y gobiernos (B2G) pueden recibir diferentes nombres entre los que, con pequeñas diferencias de funcionamiento, hablamos de mercados electrónicos, plataformas de oportunidades comerciales y directorios de proveedores (o espacios electrónicos de tipo expositivo).

Estas plataformas de negocio, para diferenciarlas de las que se dedican a negocios entre empresas y particulares (B2C), deben de cumplir los siguientes requisitos:

- Abiertas a diferentes proveedores y compradores.
- Son plataformas de intercambio, el “emarket” no vende productos en nombre propio.
- Utilizan como medio sistemas electrónicos, comúnmente internet para las operaciones.
- Los directorios de proveedores puramente publicitarios (o expositivos), no encajan exactamente en la idea de “intermediación comercial” aunque, cada vez más, incorporan pequeñas acciones que generen posibilidad de transacciones y los acercan al concepto de mercado electrónico (emarkets, Wikipedia).

OPORTUNIDADES

El crecimiento de los mercados electrónicos (B2B y B2C) es, desde hace años, una constante y las perspectivas de aumento de negocio, continuas (ver, por ejemplo, datos en “statista”)... Existen grandes oportunidades.

En Europa los mercados líderes son el Reino Unido y Alemania aunque la progresión de España, Francia e Italia es también interesante... en el resto del mundo, los mercados de China, EE.UU., India y Japón, entre otros, son increíblemente atractivos (ver infografía, “remarkety”).

Entre los mercados electrónicos más potentes, por país, conviene tener en cuenta la información de “business.com” aunque también es importante ver las recientes oportunidades que surgen en mercados de “nicho”, como pone de relieve este artículo de la revista “emprendedores”.

Iniciativas destacables y relativamente recientes para el mercado español son las cooperaciones con Tmall (general) y con Amazon (alimentación) de “Correos” e “ICEX”, respectivamente.

RECOMENDACIONES

Entre las recomendaciones para operar en “emarkets” de uso profesional, merece la pena prestar atención a las sugerencias recientes tanto de “HBR” y de “emarketservices”. Además, es importante al presentar la oferta comercial (en B2B primará la calidad, precio y claridad de la oferta de cara al profesional y no tanto, más típicas del B2C, otras estratagemas de tipo psicológico), entender que -aunque relativamente más sencillo-, estamos entrando en un “proceso de exportación”.

A pesar de que la familiaridad y confianza en los medios electrónicos es cada vez mayor, no debemos olvidar el actuar con prudencia y precaución ante posibles fraudes... Es cierto que algunas de estas plataformas ofrecen sistemas propios de seguridad del servicio y/o de las operaciones (revisan y controlan la realidad y fiabilidad de proveedores y compradores) pero:

- Nunca está de más y desde el primer momento valorar la calidad del contacto y la posible operación (así evitaremos perder tiempo en todo el ciclo comercial para descubrir, al final del proceso, que no era un proveedor/cliente fiable o poco profesional), así como
- ser muy precavidos para asegurar el cierre de la operación (al margen de solicitar pagos previos u otras formas de confirmar la mayor parte del cobro, no debemos olvidar la posibilidad de que, para operaciones importantes, el crédito documentario es un elemento perfecto y totalmente seguro ver concepto básico en “[cámaras de comercio”).
